The emotional and financial cost of settling an estate

THE CONCERN:

Settling an estate can be costly, both emotionally and financially.

When you die, your loved ones could face the following emotional burdens:

Impulsive decisions	your loved ones could make poor decisions while grieving
Disagreements	when an estate is left unallocated, disputes over distribution of assets are possible
Invasion of privacy	if the estate is probated, anyone may obtain access to the court file to view the will
Delays	the process of settling an estate can take an average of 12-18 months ¹

They could also face the following financial burdens:

Probate fees	vary from province to province, from as low as $106 to as high as $28,648.10 to settle a million dollar estate
Executor fees	typically between 2.5% and 5.0% of the estate value
Accounting fees	the average Canadian hourly rate is estimated at $250 per hour
Legal fees	can significantly reduce the estate value, averaging 3% to 6%, or an hourly charge of more than $200
Dealing with creditors	creditors make the first claim on an estate's assets; only then are the remainder of your assets distributed

²Probate fees: in Nova Scotia, $973.45 on the first $100,000 and $16.45 per $1,000 after that; in Alberta, $400 on assets above $250,000.

The legacy settlement option

The legacy settlement option allows you to choose how the death benefit will be paid to your beneficiaries: a lump-sum payment, a payout annuity or a combination of both, and each can receive a different proportion of the benefit. It makes sense in a number of situations including:

- blended families with stepchildren,
- heirs with poor spending habits,
- dependants with varying degrees of capability,
- minors and financially dependent heirs, and
- when wealth skips a generation.

If you're in one of these situations, or you have specific preferences about where your money goes and how it's paid out, the legacy settlement option allows you to direct your assets exactly as you wish. It provides an inexpensive, swift and private distribution of assets

Privacy is an important concern

We try to safeguard the privacy of our financial and personal matters. Yet, a probated will is a public document. An estate's value is included in court records that can be accessed by the general public. For example, in Ontario, for a fee, anyone can obtain a copy of a will and a probate application that has been filed with the court (except, rarely, when a judge has ordered the file sealed). There is potential harm in making this information public. Beneficiaries and vulnerable persons could become targets for financial abuse.

With Sun Life GIFs, the death benefit passes privately to beneficiaries. The amount and identity of heirs can't be accessed publicly.
